Tour of Missouri recap

This year Cheryl and I took part in Randy Martin's "tour of Missouri" trip on April 25, 26, 27 & 28th. Our trip started on the 24th with a gracious invite to spend the night in Orland Ill. With Jeff and Deb Peloquin. Breaking up the trip down and traveling with friends is never a bad idea. First Jeff and Deb took us to their favorite BBQ joint where we had some of the best fall off the bone ribs I have ever had and to top it off our first campfire on their back deck to finish the evening. Thank you, Jeff and Deb!

On Thursday morning we departed around 8 am. Stopping in Bloomington to drop their dog off with family and see the grand kids, traveling down the road to Litchfield Ill. Where we had lunch at the Artisan Cafe. a must do stop on Route 66. Continuing down to Jackson Missouri things were going good until Saint Louis then rush hour and the rain started at the same time. The 16's tires don't want to work very well in ponding water, so we had to slow down at times, but we made it by 5 pm, got checked in at the motel and then the trip to Randy and April's for a kickoff gathering. Gib and Tammy Loudon made the trip also. Gib was battling a cold so they skipped the gathering on Thursday night.

The group this year consist of 4 Camaros from EMCC, 2 Corvettes, 1 Honda, 1 1968 Sunbeam ( that came standard with a 302 ford V8) from the Missouri Hot Rod Club, Randy's 68 Camaro and 3 Camaros from WMCC. A nice mixed group that got a lot of looks and toured well together.

Friday morning departing around 8 am again. Heading north west to Rolla Missouri by way of Perryville. Did you know they have Paved Intersections in Missouri with NO street signs for right of way? They do and it teaches you to look both ways. Great rolling countryside and NO potholes.

In Perryville we stopped at the James M Eddiemann Military Museum/Missouri National Veterans Memorial. This is a new museum that I believe just had their grand opening May 17th. THEY HAVE A COMPLETE, EXACT SISTER WALL of the Vietnam War Memorial. You don't have to go to Washington to see it. Traffic was Waayy better. They have plans to honor all 5 branches of the military.

Supper on Friday night was at Randy's Road Kill Cafe. This is a nice casual eatery out in the country away from all the city noise. Inside Randy's Road Kill you will find a Sword Fish hanging on the wall that if you ask Jeff Peloquin will tell you the story of how HE caught it when he was way younger.

Saturday morning was again and 8 am start. Heading north to the Lake of the Ozarks and a tour of Ozark Distillery. Still enjoying the great countryside of Missouri, Randy has picked out some great roads for the trip. Head Distiller Dave Huffman, and owner of Ozark Distillery was our tour guide which consist on a one room Pole Barn with a still and ageing vats, But the description of the process and the stores that Dave told made it Very Worth wile. Thankx Dave.

Lunch at Red Head's Grill on the Lake was a great stop also. settled into the hill side with a marina, next door to a race boat shop, lots of windows, views to the right of million-dollar homes and views to the left of old 70's trailer houses. What a contrast, something for everyone.

For supper most of the group went to a chain Steak House downtown Rolla, Deb and Jeff with Cheryl and I decided being so close we would go back to the Devil's Elbow. A stop on Route 66 that we went to a few years back. It was great to go back, the food was good, we were later in the evening than last time and it was a much younger crowd this time. Life is good. Some Late night parking lot repairs on the Sunbeam, plugs, possible a firing order problem seems ford has more than one for the 302. When they were done it ran a lot better.

Sunday started with a trip to Bob's Gasoline Alley, just outside of Cuba

Missouri. Which happened to be on Our way home. Tours at Bob's are by appointment only, with the network we had going Randy came up with the # and made arraignments. Great stop to see a bunch of collectibles. 3 buildings worth. If you ever get a chance this is a must stop.

Thankx go out to Jeff and Deb Peloquin for letting us tag along and Special Thankx to Randy and April Martin for putting on such a great weekend. THANK YOU, John Smith

Here Are The Other Changes For The 2020 Camaro

We already knew that an update to the refreshed front end of the Camaro SS was expedited for production after Chevy received a ton of negative feedback about the controversial front end of the facelifted 2019 model. Chevy officially confirmed the new front end earlier in May, and also announced a new Camaro LT1 model that will join the lineup as an affordable V8-powered model. In addition to all that, the 2020 Camaro will also see various other noteworthy changes outside of those two (rather major) items.

So, here are all the 2020 Camaro changes and updates we know of thus far.

Powertrain

GM 10-speed automatic transmission now available in conjunction with models powered by 3.6L V6 LGX engine (previously available only with 8-speed automatic transmission)

3LT now comes standard with the 2.0L Turbo LTG engine (was previously standard with 3.6L LGX engine and optional with 2.0L Turbo LTG)

Addition of Camaro LT1 model, which is powered by the 6.2L V8 LT1 engine making 455 horsepower (339 kW) and with a starting MSRP of $34,9951 (including destination); it slots below the Camaro SS in the 2020 Camaro lineup

2020 Camaro LT1
Exterior

New front fascia for SS models, with a repositioned bowtie emblem in the upper grille and a body-color bar between the upper and lower grilles

Rally Green exterior color

Rear spoiler available on LS and LT (previously available only as part of RS package on LS and LT models)

Dark-tinted taillamps available on LS and LT (previously available only as part of RS package on LS and LT models)

20-inch forged aluminum wheels available on LT, LT1 and SS (previously available only with RS package on LT models)

Red or orange brake calipers available on LT, LT1 and SS models (previously orange calipers were available on SS models only, orange calipers were not available at all)

Black bowtie badges and Camaro fender badge available on LT

Interior

- Red seat belts available on all models (previously on ZL1 only)
- Red kneepads available on all models (previously also available on all models, so it's a bit strange that Chevy lists this as a new feature)
- Recaro performance seats available on LT (previously available only on LT 1LE)
- Sueded microfiber-trimmed steering wheel and shift knob trim available on LT and SS (previously available on LT 1LE, SS 1LE, and ZL1)
- Alloy pedals available on all models (previously standard only on ZL1 and not available on other models)
- Adrenaline Red and Ceramic White leather interiors now available on 2LT (previously only available on 3LT and 2SS only)

Packaging

- 3LT trim level now comes standard with the Convenience and Lighting package (previously optional), which includes:
- Memory Package, which recalls two driver “presets” for 8-way power driver seat and outside mirrors
 - Heated steering wheel
 - Multi-color Driver Information Center
 - Head-Up Display
 - Rear Park Assist
 - Rear Cross Traffic Alert
 - Lane Change Alert with Side Blind Zone Alert
 - Forward Collision Alert
 - Outside heated power-adjustable and driver-side auto-dimming, body-color mirrors
 - Interior spectrum lighting
- That’s all we know so far about the other changes and updates to the 2020 Camaro, though we expect that more changes will surface as we get closer to the model’s launch. Subscribe to GM Authority for more Camaro news, Chevrolet news and continuous GM news coverage.

About Chevrolet Camaro

The Chevrolet Camaro is a family of sports cars that includes a two-door coupe and two-door soft-top convertible as well as various performance variants such as SS, 1LE, ZL1 and ZL1 1LE. The legendary nameplate was first introduced in 1966 and went out of production in 2002, when the model was in its fourth generation. The Camaro was re-introduced in 2009 as an all-new fifth-generation model based on the GM Zeta platform.

The Camaro is currently Chevrolet's most affordable sports car, slotting below the Chevrolet Corvette. The current model was introduced for the 2016 model year and represents the sixth generation of the Camaro nameplate. The model rides on the GM Alpha platform shared with the Cadillac ATS and Cadillac CTS, though the majority of the architecture underpinning the Camaro are unique to it.

The 2018 Chevy Camaro represents the third model year of the sixth-gen Camaro that deleted the Camaro 50th Anniversary Edition and the Krypton Green exterior color, while adding the ZL1 1LE Extreme Track Performance Package. There's also an expanded availability of the SS 1LE Track Performance Package, which is now available on the 2SS Coupe, as well as the addition of a washer fluid level sensor.

A midcycle refresh arrives for the 2019 model year that introduces new, model-specific front and rear styling, a new trim level structure for LT models that adds a new 3LT trim, and a new 1LE track performance package for the 2.0L Turbo LTG engine. The 2019 Camaro also brings the new GM 10-speed automatic transmission for SS models, the Rear Camera Mirror, third-generation infotainment systems, and various other enhancements.

The gen six Chevy Camaro is assembled for all markets by GM USA at the GM Lansing Grand River plant in Lansing, Michigan, USA.

Camaro, Corvette Won't Meet EU Emissions Laws For New Cars After August 2019

The sixth-generation Chevrolet Camaro and the C7 Corvette will soon be pulled out from the EU, as they do not meet stricter World Light Vehicle Test Procedure regulations that will be implemented starting August 31, 2019.

The new EU emissions regulations will include changes to the approval tests and procedures and will require existing vehicles to be re-certified. We imagine General Motors elected not to spend the money required to re-certify the Camaro due to its relatively small sales figures in the EU, while the C7 Corvette was already on its way out to make room for the mid-engine Corvette C8.

Britain's Motoring Research says the last batch of new sixth-generation Camaros and C7 Corvettes destined for the United Kingdom are being sold through GM dealer Ian Allen Motors, located about an hour outside of London.

"We're thrilled to be able to offer the last opportunity to own a piece of history in Corvette and Camaro," said Ian Allan Motors chairman Paul Allan. "Both models offer incredible value compared to many mid-market and commonplace sports cars, yet carry Chevrolet's legendary 6.2-litre V8 block, which is arguably one of the world's most successful performance engines."

C7 Corvette Grand Sport Final Edition

GM introduced the EU-exclusive C7 Corvette Final Edition earlier this year, which serves as the last hurrah for the C7 Corvette (and likely front-engine Corvettes altogether) in Europe. It is available as both a Corvette Grand Sport or a Z06 and is set apart by its Final Edition decals and Sebring Orange Tintcoat Metallic or Ceramic Matrix Gray Metallic paint. The Final Edition is offered in Germany and Switzerland only, with the Grand Sport Final Edition starting at 116,500 euros and the Z06 Final Edition starting at 139,500 euros.

The mid-engine Corvette C8 will debut on July 18th during a special event in California. GM has remained tight-lipped on official information, so it's not yet clear if the next-gen 'Vette will be offered in Europe.
